TRICKY WORK: Chambley's owner George Chambley Jr. works on a compound bow.

Chambley's has changed a lot over the years

VALLEY — Things change as time goes on and this concept is exemplified at Chambley's in Valley.

Opened in 1983 by George Chambley Sr., this outdoor store started out selling fireworks.

"We sold fireworks until about 12 to 15 years," said George Chambley Jr., the current owner. "We stopped when the big stores opened up."

Taking over the business sometime between 1987-88, Chambley has seen the store expand from fireworks to fishing bait and novelty items to a full-fledged outdoor emporium.

Currently the big seller is archery equipment and services. Chambley recalled getting into the archery business LANETT — On Thursday afternoon, the Lanett City Board of Education heard a report on cyber security in the classroom and how the system is trying to stay ahead of the game and to prevent students from falling victim to online predators.

Technology Director Katrina Goss had a power point presentation on the threats presented by phishing and what can be done about it.

People have to be extra careful these days with both computers and smart phones. "Don't open unwanted emails. You can be hacked that way," she said.

On the national level, the Children's Internet Protection Act of 2000 protects children from would-be offenders.

"Work stations are monitored in the schools," Goss said. "We have an acceptable use policy when it comes to the internet. The internet opens all kinds new worlds, but kids need to be web wise and

VALLEY — On Thursday, Monique Fischer had the chance to see some large photo murals she had read about while doing research on the works of Margaret Bourke-White at Syracuse University.

Cobb Memorial Archives has six such murals. They are four-and-a-half-foot wide and eight feet tall. They are huge enlargements of photographs taken by Bourke-White on a tour of Chattahoochee Valley textile plants in 1937.

A Massachusetts resident, Fischer is a photo conservator whose visit to Bradshaw-Chambers County Library was funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

"It's quite a piece of history the archives has here," she said.

For the most part, the photo murals are in pretty good shape, given that they are more than 80 years old and for many years weren't kept in the best of conditions. Some of them bear some damage.

Fischer said that it might not be a bad idea to digitize the originals to make some reproductions for display.

"The originals need to be put away for safe keeping," she said.

For many years, the photo murals were attached to the walls of the West Point Manufacturing Company Testing Lab near Shawmut Mill.

The board presented Lanett High head football coach Clifford Story a plaque in recognition for his Panthers being the 2017 Class 2A state champions.

“He not only can coach football, he also does a great job of keeping a bus fleet in good shape,” Superintendent Phillip Johnson said, referencing a letter the school system recently received from Chad Carpenter, transportation administrator with the State Department of Education.

Lanett had 12 school buses to go through a routine inspection.
“No buses were found to have any major deficiencies,” Carpenter wrote. “We want to thank you and your maintenance staff for their continued efforts to provide safe buses for the students in Lanett City Schools.”
In addition to being the head football coach, Story is also the system’s athletic director and transportation director.

In his report to the board, Johnson said that he anticipated having to hire to more elementary teachers next year based on growth at W.O. Lance Elementary School.
“As of today, there are 605 students in pre-k through the sixth grade,” Johnson said.

On March 31, the system had an ending balance of a little over $1.4 million. Total revenues have increased from this time last year by close to $55,000.

Johnson said he was pleased for a ring ceremony to have taken place at Lanett High on Thursday. Members of the varsity football team got rings as a reward for having won the 2017 2A state title. It was the school’s first state title in football since 1963 and the fourth one overall.

Since 2010, Lanett High has won three state titles in boys basketball, two in track and one in football.

Johnson reported that some Lanett High students recently visited Auburn University, Clark-Atlanta University and AUM.

“This is the season for college shopping, and we are providing as many opportunities as we can for students to tour post-secondary schools,” he said.

Educators who will be retiring at the end of the current school year will be honored at the May board meeting. This year’s Lanett High Prom will be taking place at West Point Depot on Saturday, April 21. This year’s baccalaureate service will take place on May 20 and graduation on May 25.

During her visit, Fischer conducted a workshop, offering advice on how to care for and preserve photographs.

Bourke-White’s visit to the Valley was arranged by Carlton Richmond of the Wellington Sears Company in Boston. She took photos in Lanett, Shawmut, Langdale and Fairfax mills. Carl Gaither of the WPMC Research Department was her guide. He showed her all the local mills before she decided which scenes to shoot.

To get the right angle, she would climb tall ladders where she could look down on men who were at work on such machines as looms, slashers, slubbers and a jacquard loom making Martex towels.

Bourke-White took photographs over a two-day period, Gaither offered a helping hand with the lighting. She chose six images for reproduction in the huge murals.

Several weeks after she’d left, a messenger from New York came to the Valley to deliver the pictures.

At the time, they were only around two feet by three feet, but with some rubbing and stretching done by the messenger, they were extended to their full size of four-and-a-half by eight and with breathtaking detail.

Bourke-White (1904-1971) is best known as the first foreign photographer to take pictures of the Soviet five-year plan. She was also allowed to photograph Joseph Stalin. She was the first female war photojournalist, taking pictures of Russian’s defense against the Nazi invasion 1941.

showing are from the University of Alabama collection. They show Indian trails, Indian names for creeks and villages and the first settler roads. He will also present images showing the rural locations of homes and buildings that appear on the first aerial photographs of the county taken by the federal government by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the 1930s.

“The content of Dr. Mac’s presentation may be helpful for anyone studying rural family history and wanting to develop a sense of house location for family ancestors and neighbors,” said Malinda Powers, CVHS president.

Holderfield said that he was born into farm families composed of many elderly relatives who were the last non-mechanized farmers in Chambers County and nearby Heard County, Ga. “They treasured their farm land,” he said. “They all but worshiped it. Their fields had names as simple as the Gray Field, where Indians had lived, and disturbing names such as the Devil’s Half Acre,” he said. “Stories were told about the animals, branches and creeks and about the trees and the woods. No one ever boasted about how much wealth they had accumulated by the end of the year. They did have pride in how well they’d built and maintained. They had grown plants and animals appropriate to the land of the era while struggling to survive the vagaries of decades of eco-

Holderfield adds that his ancestors did not perceive the land, nor their labor, as commodities. “They possessed many self sufficiency skills which contributed to their sense of self-worth and independence,” he said. “I absorbed my ancestors’ attachment to the earth at my birthplace on Stroud Creek in Chambers County. I was motivated to understand the land’s physical elements as well as the societies of the people who lived there.”

In the pre-electronic past, rural farm families spent much time sharing stories across generations inhabiting a household. Among Holderfield’s families, an oral tradition of storytelling about the olden times was maintained. His curiosity about his families’ historical experiences stimulated an interest in local history from childhood and led to him earning two degrees in history from Auburn University and having a year as a Fulbright Fellow studying medieval history in Germany. He then taught history for six years before seeking to further his education. As a Kellogg Fellow, Holderfield earned a Ph.D. in Higher Education from Florida State University.

He retired following 25 years of employment with the South Carolina State Board for Technical and Comprehensive Education, 18 years of which he’d served as the associate executive director of instruction. He and wife Linda then returned to the family farm along Stroud Creek in 1998.

“We sell a lot of archery equipment,” he said. “We also work on bows. We do a lot of that.”

Chambley noted there is a novelty to his store. If one were to drive past it, they would usually assume it to be nothing more than an old gas station.

“Not a day goes by that someone doesn’t walk and be surprised by the merchandise we carry,” he said. “The clothing options are the biggest surprise.”

Visitors to the store can pick up a variety of items, including fishing supplies, hunting gear, propane, kerosene, clothing and boots, alongside normal convenience store wares.

When it comes to adding items to sell, Chambley has certain criteria in mind.

“I like to get something that people can’t get in a big box store,” he said. “More niche items. It gives us an edge. Archery was kind of like that.”

Currently Chambley has four people working for him: a full-time employee and three part-timers.

He also receives help from his wife, Susie, and son, George Chambley III.

He also has two daughters, Abby and Hannah. Both are expected to graduation from the Auburn University this year.

“George helps out every now and then,” Chambley said. “We try to focus on the fact we are a family owned business and that we give back to the community.”

OUR HISTORY

A history of serving our communities

The Valley Times-News started publication as a daily newspaper March 2, 1950 as the result of combining three weekly newspapers, The Chattahoochee Valley Times, The Valley Tribune and The West Point News.

Come out and visit the Expo

Event is a great way of learning about local businesses

This Friday, the Greater Valley Chamber of Commerce will present the 2nd annual Business Expo & Luncheon at the Valley Community Center.

According to Chamber Executive Director Ashley Crane, the event will feature 35 businesses looking to show off what they have to offer.

Everyone that can should stop by and take a look around.

If you are a current or prospective entrepreneur, stop by and see if any local businesses might have something to offer you.

All should stop by and take a look at all the businesses available in the area. There might be something you didn't know was here.

If you've been here for some time, this is a good excuse to get to know some of the newer businesses better. If you are new, then it's the perfect way to learn.

No matter who you are, there should be something for you to see. And really, that's the whole point.

As citizens of the Valley area, we should all be aware of what is in our backyard.

The Greater Valley Area has been slowly getting more active over the past few years and that trend looks to continue and even speed up as the years go on.

So, let's go out tomorrow and spend some time learning about local businesses.

Anyone interested in visiting the Expo can do so at the Valley Community Center on Friday, April 13 from 10:30 a.m. EDT until noon.

There is no cost to attend.

PLEASE FIX: There's a rough spot on River Road across from Fairfax Depot. The curb was torn up as well, but that has been repaired. Some asphalt needs to go in to make for a smoother ride. That should be done in a few weeks when River Road is resurfaced from Trammell Block to the intersection with Columbus Road. Paving will proceed across the intersection and along California Road, toward School Street.

How we can make our schools safer

Education is the most important service our government provides, and one of the top issues impacting education is school safety.

Unfortunately, it seems like every conversation about school safety always turns into a debate about guns, and nothing ever gets done.

But there are a lot of things we can – and should – be doing to make our schools safer without even getting into the gun issue. In fact, mass shootings are only one threat to our schools. Kidnappings, sexual assaults, fights and bomb threats are also concerns, and none of those have anything to do with guns.

First, there should be a trained resource officer or law enforcement officer in every school.

Yes, this would cost money that some school systems might not have, which means the state would have to help pay the bill.

Plus, resource officers can't be everywhere at once. And as we saw with the school shooting in Florida, just because a resource officer is there doesn't always mean that officer will do what they are supposed to do.

But having a resource officer in a school could make the difference in a mass-shooting situation. And having an officer on each campus could be a deterrent to potential kidnappers, sexual predators and students who might get into a fight.

Aside from resource officers, there are other common sense measures we can take to keep our schools safe. And we can start by applying the lessons we learned from the shooting that took place at Huffman High School in Birmingham last month.

In that case, according to Superintendent Lisa Herring, the school had 43 entry points, and those entry points were not appropriately monitored. Also, their metal detectors were not working.

First, there should only be one or two places where someone can enter a school. There can be multiple exits for emergencies, but those exits need to be one-way doors so that people can go out but not come in.

Second, no person who isn't a faculty member should ever be able to walk into a school without having to check-in at the main office. And I would consider supporting legislation that would make it a crime to enter a school without registering with the main office except in emergency situations.

Third, every school entrance and exit point ought to be monitored with video surveillance cameras, and all entrance points ought to have functioning metal detectors. At the very least, our state government needs to look into funding a grant program that would help local schools be able to afford these kinds of metal detectors and surveillance systems.

Along these lines, the state should consider using technology funds to help put computerized visitor management systems in our schools. Front office staff can use these systems to check visitors against a national sex offender database by scanning their driver's license or other government issued identification. These systems also allow staff to flag visitors and cross check their system with larger databases at the state and federal levels.

Schools should also have perimeter fences to deter trespassers and limit an intruder's access to school grounds.

Fourth, all school entrance points should have a double entry door system where the second door is locked and can only be unlocked from within the main office. This way, even if a person comes in with a gun they cannot get past the second door unless the front office staff lets them in. And there should be at least one panic button in the front office.

Because of the cost of some of these security measures, I wouldn't want to make them a mandate on existing schools. But I do believe we need legislation mandating that all future school construction take these guidelines into consideration when designing the layout of a new school. And we need to look at using state funding to match local investments in these kinds of security measures for existing schools.

Other things we can be doing to help school safety and public safety would be to better fund mental health care and do a better job of enforcing the gun laws we already have (too many shooters, including the shooter in Florida, were known to be threats but the system failed to stop them).

There are a lot of things we can be doing to make our schools safer, and doing these things can not only help stop a potential shooter but also prevent other threats such as kidnappings and sexual assaults. School safety is not just a gun issue, and continuing to do nothing is not an acceptable option.

Craig Ford represents Gadsden and Etowah County in the Alabama House of Representatives. He is currently running for the State Senate in District 10 as an Independent.

WHAT OTHERS ARE SAYING

TARIFF TO HAVE HUGE IMPACT ON NEWSPAPERS

New tariffs on aluminum and steel and products from China are getting a lot of media coverage, but a similar threat exists in the publishing world.

The paper that you are reading now is directly threatened by tariffs onto the imports of newsprint from Canada. These range from duties as high as 32 percent.

According to the News Media Alliance, the tariffs started with a newspaper mill in the Pacific Northwest called NORPAC. In August 2017, NORPAC petitioned the United States Department of Commerce to begin applying tariffs to newsprint imported from Canada. They claimed the imported paper was harming the U.S. paper industry at large. NORPAC is acting in its own interest here.

NORPAC is a small mill in Washington state. No other U.S. mill is supporting North Pacific, and the reason why is simple. The industry knows tariffs will cause damage to newspapers and ultimately reduce the demand for newsprint.

The Times-Journal is an important part of your community. We have served DeKalb County for nearly 140 years, and we plan to be here for 140 more.

These tariffs directly affect our community's ability to get its newspaper. Community newspapers around the United States will feel a hit from this.

In the past month, the Times-Journal has been able to provide its readers with comprehensive content from around the county with special editions in addition to our regular news coverage. New tariffs would make this near impossible in the future.

According to The Daily News in Galveston, Texas, a sister publication of the Times-Journal, more than 60 organizations with stakes in the future availability and price of paper have formed a coalition to fight back against these unnecessary and harmful impediments to free trade.

Russia says Syrian government now in control of rebel town

BEIRUT (AP) — The Russian military announced on Thursday that the Syrian government is now in full control of the last rebel-held town on the outskirts of Damascus that was the site of a suspected chemical attack over the weekend.

The development would mark a major victory for the Syrian President Bashar Assad as the United States and allies consider punitive military attacks against Syria following the suspected chemical attack that killed 40 people.

However, there was no official announcement by Damascus, and no indication that Syrian government forces had entered the town of Douma on Thursday. One government flag was raised in the town, a war monitoring group said.

Syrian TV stations showed civilians in vehicles carrying the Syrian flag crossing from Damascus into Douma.

Douma and the enclave of eastern Ghouta, just east of Damascus, was a significant rebel stronghold during Syria's civil war, now in its eighth year. Its effective surrender to government forces comes after years of siege by Assad's troops and a months-long, intense military offensive.

$30,000 rumor? Tabloid paid for, spiked, salacious Trump tip before the company that owns the National Enquirer paid $150,000 to a former Playboy Playmate who claimed she'd had an affair with Donald Trump, the tabloid's parent made a $30,000 payment to a less famous individual: a former doorman at one of the real estate mogul's New York City buildings.

As it did with the ex-Playmate, the Enquirer signed the ex-doorman to a contract that effectively prevented him from going public with a juicy tale that might hurt Trump's campaign for president.

The payout to the former Playmate, Karen McDougal, stayed a secret until the Wall Street Journal published a story about it days before Election Day.

Questions & Answers

What is the Lord's Supper all about?

The Lord's Supper was (and still is) a meal that Christians would eat together at their Sunday gathering that centered around unleavened bread which symbolized Jesus' body, broken on the cross, and wine which symbolized the blood of Jesus poured out at the cross. Somehow Jesus is present with us during this meal (Hebrews 12:24). 1 Corinthians 11 emphasizes the communal nature of the meal as well, not just with Jesus, but with all other Christians present. While we may have many differences, we all have a need to eat, and thus we center around the table. It is a place where we proclaim the Lord's death (including the resurrection) until He comes again (1 Corinthians 11:26) and so we eat not only in memory, but also in anticipation for the day that the Lord returns and fixes all that is broken. It certainly is an act that should strengthen us!

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. 'Dear Abby' Girl feels guilty for partying during breakup with boyfriend

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old senior and have been dating the same boy for two years. A month ago, he told me he wanted to break up "because he needed some time to figure out what he wanted." I was devastated but agreed. Two weeks later, he told me he was sorry and he loves me.

We are back together now, but the weekend after our breakup, I went to visit a college girlfriend. We went to a party and I ended up having sex with a boy I didn't even know. I feel guilty and unworthy. What should I do? If I tell my boyfriend, I'm sure I'll lose him for good. If I don't tell him, I'll always worry that he will find out from someone else. -- UNWORTHY IN THE MIDWEST item off of my dinner? I don't want to waste food, and I would like my meal prepared to my specifications. Any suggestions? -- VEGAN IN THE WEST

DEAR VEGAN: You have every right to send a meal back if it wasn't prepared the way you requested. You, as the customer, are paying for your food, and you should not have to painstakingly scrape anything off it. Some people with dietary restrictions carry a laminated card with them that lists the foods they cannot eat. It is shown to the chef by the server at the time your order is placed. You may want to try it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died recently. We didn't have children. His family keeps contacting me and inviting me to lunch, movies, etc. The problem is, I have nothing in common with them and no longer want to spend time with them. When I make an excuse to politely bow out, they suggest another date, and another and another. How can I get them to leave me alone? -- ENJOYING MY SOLITUDE

DEAR SOLITUDE: Your former in-laws mean well, and many would consider you fortunate that they try so hard to be supportive and remain close. Keep in mind that you are their last tie to their son. However, because your polite refusals aren't getting through, tell them that while you appreciate their gesture, you are not lonely. In fact, you enjoy being "alone with your memories" and you will contact them if you change your mind.

DEAR UNWORTHY: You are acting like you have something to feel guilty about. You don't. At the time you visited your college girlfriend, your boyfriend had broken things off with you. You do not owe him an explanation or a confession as long as you haven't given him an STD. Contact your physician and be checked to be sure.

DEAR ABBY: I'm vegan and make a point of being polite to servers in restaurants. I carefully describe what I would like to eat from their menu. Although they appear to be attentive, half the time they serve me a meal with an added touch -- a scoop of sour cream or sprinkle of cheese on the top.

When it happens, is it fair to send the food back to the kitchen? Or is it better to painstakingly scrape the unrequested

Great to be back at track

Since moving to the Valley in January, I had yet to cover a track and field meet in person. So, last Saturday I decided to make the short trip to Smiths Station High School.

There, many of our local teams were competing at the Panther Invitational. Beulah, LaFayette, Lanett and Valley had a sizeable presence.

Although the weather conditions were less than ideal — it was rainy and windy — I found it refreshing to be back in my element.

Track and field is one of my two favorite sports to cover. The other is cross-country. Yes, there is a difference.

I enjoy writing about both sports because of the connection I have to them. I ran cross-country and track and field from eighth grade through my sophomore year in college. As a result, I am acquainted with the amount of work required to excel.

Distance runners log countless miles and endure painful interval workouts. Sprinters sharpen their speed and fine-tune their form relentlessly. Field event specialists hone their approaches and critique their technique with meticulousness.

This prep work is completed away from the spotlight. Too often, the performances are as well.

Cross-country and track and field rarely receive the media attention of higher-profile sports. That bothered me, especially when I was in high school.

I knew that I worked just as hard — if not harder — than the local football standouts who appeared in the paper more frequently than I did, even as my achievements stacked up compa-

MSU students charged in Tide break-in

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Four Mississippi State University students are accused of breaking into the University of Alabama's athletic facility and stealing memorabilia.

The break-in happened during the pre-dawn hours of April 4, six days before Alabama's national championship football team met with President Donald Trump at the White House, authorities said. The four managed to get inside the Mal M. Moore Athletic Facility and stole "various items of memorabilia," court records state. The crime was captured on security video, the records show.

Mississippi State is "fully cooperating" with law enforcement as they investigate, school spokesman Sid Salter said in an emailed statement.

"The future status of the students with MSU will be determined after they have received their due process of law rights according to existing university policies," Salter said.

"Clearly, these individuals will

SPRINGWOOD SOCCER: Springwood School head soccer coach John Lanier (front, center) has guided the Wildcats to a spot in the AISA state playoffs.

Wildcats clinch spot in playoffs

LANETT — Last spring, the Springwood School soccer team was not eligible for postseason competition. It played in only a handful of unofficial scrimmages that did not actually count towards a regular season record.

Much has changed in a year.

Last Saturday, the Wildcats punched their ticket to the AISA state playoffs with a 4-0 victory over Northside Methodist. It was quite an achievement for a program in its first year of formal existence.

"I was extremely happy for the guys on the team," head coach John Lanier said. "They put in a lot of hard work."

Springwood (5-5) secured the

No. 3 seed from Region 1, behind Glenwood School and Lee-Scott Academy. The Wildcats will travel on Monday to face defending state champion Autauga Academy in Prattville. Autauga is the No. 2 seed from Region 2.

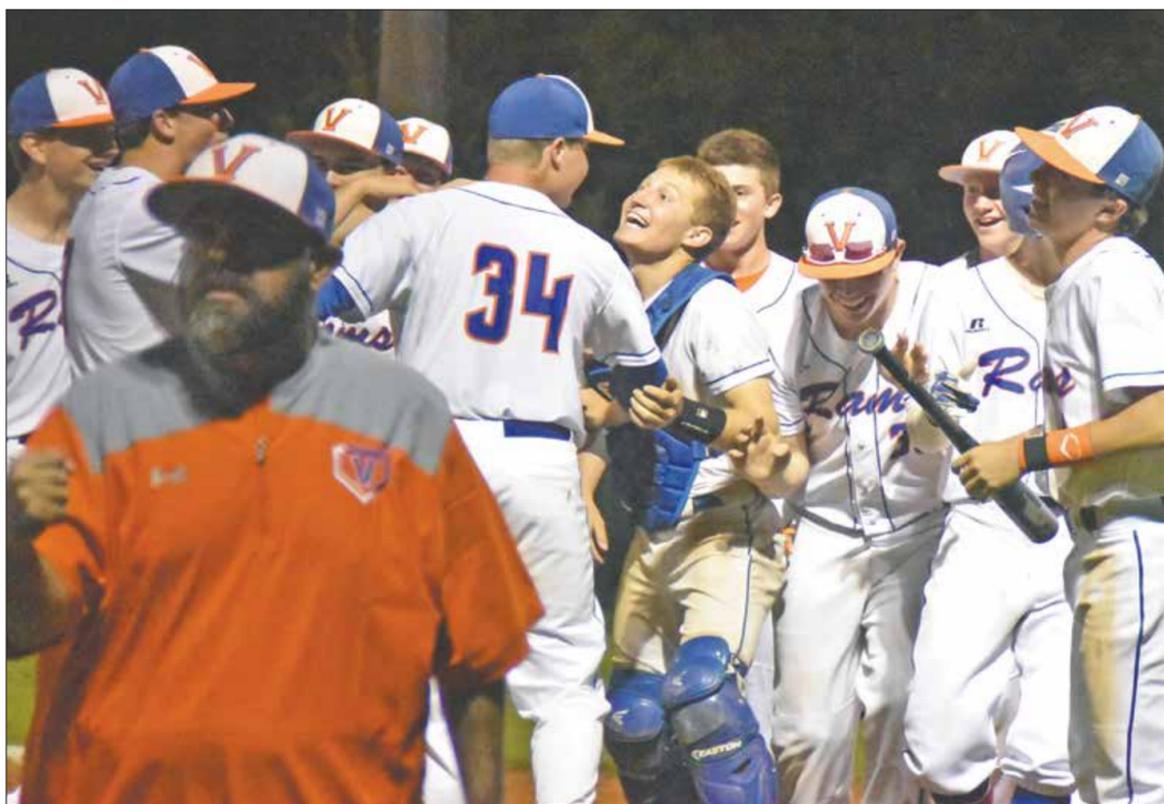

Lanier acknowledged that his team will have to navigate a difficult first-round pairing if it wants to advance to the state final four. But he knows his players won't shy away from the task.

They haven't all season.

"Even the games we've lost have been very close, and they've been against very good teams," Lanier said.

Springwood battled in its matchups with Lee-Scott and Glenwood, which were both

Valley High baseball sweeps Bearegard in doubleheader, secures Area 5 title

VALLEY — The Valley High School baseball team needed two wins to secure a second consecutive area title.

Mission accomplished.

On Thursday, the Rams swept Class 5A, Area 5 foe Bearegard in a high-stakes doubleheader at Crestview Field. Behind clutch performances from senior pitchers Josh Bledsoe and Tyler Lott, Valley dismissed Bearegard 8-3 and 10-1.

Valley dropped its first meeting at Bearegard on Tuesday, 4-1. But the Rams didn't seem to be affected by the pressure at home.

"To have our backs against the wall like we did and come out here in front of the home crowd and get two wins, that's huge," Rams head coach Patrick Shivers said. "It doesn't get any bigger than this around here."

According to Shivers, the Valley baseball program has not won back-to-back area titles in more than two decades.

Bledsoe and Lott carried the Rams to the historic achieve-

Bledsoe took command in the opening game on Thursday evening, allowing four hits and recording five strikeouts over seven innings. Only one of the three runs he surrendered was earned.

The Rams broke a 1-1 stalemate in the third inning when Steven Coker scored on a passed ball and Bledsoe punched a two RBI single to right field with two outs.

It was one of many timely hits the Rams delivered.

"It was there both games," Shivers said. "It felt like every time we had two outs with runners in scoring position we got a base hit. That's what it came down to."

Valley tacked on four more runs in the fourth inning on drives by Chris Conner, Eli Culpepper and Andrué Davis. The Rams led 8-3 entering the fifth, which was plenty of support for Bledsoe. He faced the minimum number of batters over the final three innings.

Valley parlayed its momentum into the series-deciding nightcap. The Rams plated four runs in the first inning on a pair of passed balls and RBIs off the bats of Lott and Conner.

Lott took it from there. He surrendered just four hits and recorded seven strikeouts over seven innings. The only time he ran into trouble was in the top of the third. He escaped a bases-loaded jam by throwing a two-strike breaking ball. A frozen Bearegard batter watched as it caught the corner of the plate.

"I just fought back like my coach always tells me: fight, fight, fight," Lott said.

Bearegard scored one run in the fifth inning to cut into Valley's advantage. But Daniel Osborne delivered the dagger with a monstrous sixth-inning grand slam that sailed over the left field fence. Its destination, like the game's outcome, was never in doubt.

"That's what it's all about," Shivers said.

The area-clinching victory also locked up home-field advantage for the first round of the state playoffs.

state semifinalists a season ago.

The Wildcats took Lee-Scott to overtime in their first meeting before falling 3-2 in the game's final minute. In Tuesday's regular-season finale at Glenwood, Springwood lost by the same score.

To earn a positive result on Monday, Springwood will continue to rely upon the play of its backline. It has shown the ability to withstand sustained pressure throughout the season.

The Wildcats also will need forwards Coleman Hull and Kannon Key to put shots on net.

Hull, who has a team-leading 16 goals, posted a hat trick in the playoff-clinching win over Northside Methodist; Key recorded the other tally in the 4-0 victory.

A similarly productive showing should keep Springwood in contention at Autauga.

That would be an accomplishment of its own given the teams' disparate histories. But Lanier thinks his squad is capable of more.

"Anything can happen in the playoffs," he said.

I set out to remedy this disparity when I entered the sports journalism world four years ago.

At my former job in Birmingham, I covered high school cross-country and track and field events on an almost weekly basis. Many Saturdays were spent trekking around the state in an effort to chronicle the next personal record.

The athletes I wrote about deserved the coverage, and it was well-received.

While the demands of my current position do not grant me the liberty to attend as many meets as I did formerly, I believe that local sprinters, hurdlers, high jumpers, long jumpers and distance runners merit attention.

Saturday may have been the first track and field meet I attended since moving to the Valley. Certainly, it will not be my last.

have to face the consequences of their actions, whatever those actions might be," he added.

All four men are charged with third-degree burglary, a felony.

In Alabama, the athletic facility on the main campus in Tuscaloosa is "the centerpiece of Crimson Tide Athletics" and home to Alabama's football program, the university says on its website.

It was unoccupied when the crime occurred, authorities said.

Former Tide star Foster charged in assault against girlfriend

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — San Francisco 49ers linebacker Reuben Foster has been charged with felony domestic violence after being accused of attacking his girlfriend, authorities said.

The Santa Clara County District Attorney said Foster was charged Thursday and is scheduled to be arraigned later in the day in San Jose.

Prosecutors said the 24-year-old Foster attacked his girlfriend in February at their Los Gatos home, leaving her bruised and with a ruptured ear drum.

The 28-year-old woman told responding officers that Foster dragged her by her hair, physically threw her out of the house, and punched her in the head eight to 10 times.

Foster was also charged with felony possession of an assault weapon and misdemeanor possession of a high-capacity magazine after officers found a Sig Sauer 516 short-barreled rifle in his home while investigating his girlfriend's domestic violence report.

If convicted on all charges, he faces up to 11 years in prison.

Woods files entry to play US Open for 1st time since 2015

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Tiger Woods has filed his entry to play in the U.S. Open for the first time since 2015.

The USGA says Woods officially entered on Thursday, four days after he tied for 32nd in the Masters. Even exempt players have to formally enter the U.S. Open. Woods hasn't played the U.S. Open since he missed the cut at Chambers Bay with rounds of 80-76.

The U.S. Open is June 14-17 at Shinnecock Hills on Long Island, where Woods made his U.S. Open debut in 1995 as the U.S. Amateur champion.
